ECONOMY

Ms. M. Johnson (Carleton-Victoria, Leader of the Official Opposition, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. We are past the halfway point of this government's mandate, and it would be normal to expect concrete deliverables for New Brunswickers by now. We are an incredibly trade-exposed province with a sluggish economy, minimal investment, and a budget deficit and debt that show no sign of abating. The Premier promised a balanced budget and economic growth, and neither seem attainable. Government members seem content to manage the decline.

[Translation]

My question for the Premier is this: Where is the plan for strong economic growth and the reliable budget plan that will enable New Brunswick to escape this spiral?

Hon. Ms. Holt (Fredericton South-Silverwood, Premier; Minister responsible for Official Languages, L): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. Thank you very much for the question. I can tell you about our economic development plan that was unveiled several months ago. It's an ambitious, rather bold plan, because our objective is a 10% increase in our GDP. I'm convinced we will reach our objective because of several really positive factors.

First of all, we're making infrastructure investments that are very important for exports.

[Original]

We are seeing a $463-million investment in the expansion of Port Saint John to support its ability to get New Brunswickers' products—what the world wants—overseas to new customers. Pair that with the work that we're doing in the mining sector and the work that we're doing in the defence sector, both of which have new strategies. We're seeing new activity in the Caribou Mine. We're going to see new activity in Lake George with one of the best partners in the world in Agnico Eagle. Madam Speaker, this government has an economic development plan, and we are putting ourselves—

Ms. M. Johnson (Carleton-Victoria, Leader of the Official Opposition, PC): I couldn't help but notice that agriculture wasn't mentioned.

(Interjections.)

Ms. M. Johnson (Carleton-Victoria, Leader of the Official Opposition, PC): Nor was forestry.

Madam Speaker, the people of New Brunswick need to know that their government has a plan that seeks to ensure the prosperity of all of its people.

It's hard to find a metric that's going in the right direction, but I want to give the Premier a chance to say anything that she hasn't yet added.

[Translation]

Our fellow citizens need hope, jobs, a health care system they can count on, and, more generally, a government that acts in their best interests.

[Original]

To the Premier, can you tell this House that you have a job growth plan that is real and dynamic and not just more consultations and photo ops?

Hon. Ms. Holt (Fredericton South-Silverwood, Premier; Minister responsible for Official Languages, L): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I really appreciate the question, because we are doing so much in terms of economic growth that it takes more than a minute to cover it. There is a clear plan in place. The member opposite should have a copy of it because it's been out for some time. It articulates our critical sectors: minerals, agriculture, forestry, defence, cybersecurity, arts and culture, and tourism. The Minister of Tourism could tell you about the growth that we've seen in that sector. The statistics and the results are there. We see average weekly earnings increasing by 6%. We have established a metric for an increase in wages, and we are exceeding our own targets on increasing wages for New Brunswickers. We see that retail trade is up, food services are up, the real GDP is up, labour productivity is up, and manufacturing sales are up by 41%. Madam Speaker, exports are up by 25%, construction activity is up by 47%, and building permits are up by 25%. We are building a competitive and resilient New Brunswick, investing like never before, and—

Ms. M. Johnson (Carleton-Victoria, Leader of the Official Opposition, PC): Well, I'm glad she was able to elucidate that, because now New Brunswickers can listen to that and sit back and say: Why the heck do I not feel any growth? Why do I not…

(Interjections.)

Madam Speaker, I was honestly hoping for a little bit more, but we are a constructive opposition, and we will always stand ready to assist the government when it does get things right. While I recognize that not every factor affecting affordability is within the government's control, surely there are steps that we can take to provide relief.

[Translation]

Again, would the Premier like to present the Legislative Assembly with a clear plan regarding investments in our province and job creation for our fellow citizens, as well as a budget that doesn't place a burden on our children and that will enable us to escape the spiral we are in?

[Original]

I blew that one.

[Translation]

Thank you.

[Original]

Hon. Ms. Holt (Fredericton South-Silverwood, Premier; Minister responsible for Official Languages, L): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. No, you didn't blow that one. To the member opposite, we appreciate the efforts in French very much.

[Translation]

We appreciate it.

[Original]

If you want more, I'm happy to give you more. Our agricultural growth strategy is on the verge of being released, even though the investments are already happening. We budgeted more than $1 million of new money for agricultural growth, and that is getting out the door to projects that matter. We are supporting New Brunswick companies as they expand. There have been exciting announcements, like the one earlier this week at MQM, which, in the face of a tariff war with tariffs on steel, is modernizing, investing, adding to its labour force, and growing jobs in Tracadie, as was specifically announced. That is not the only one. We've invested in companies like Apex in the Moncton area, which is also adding more employees to its payroll and expanding its opportunities. This government is committed to creating well-paying jobs for New Brunswickers. That's why we have a plan, and that's why we're starting to see results.

SCHOOL NUTRITION PROGRAM

Mr. Savoie (Saint John East, PC): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

[Original]

After my questions on October 27, I was sent a picture of a sandwich that had been delivered to students the day before. It had an expiry date of November 16. That sandwich would have lasted 21 days due to the preservatives in it. Sodium benzoate is a synthetic preservative. Potassium sorbate is a chemical preservative that stops the growth of mould, yeast, and fungi. Sugar is listed twice. Modified corn starch is a complex carbohydrate, but it has a high glycemic index. This means that it acts in your body much like a simple sugar does. The sandwich also has milk enzymes and proteins. I hope you're not allergic. It is neither nutritious nor local. It was made and packaged in Terrebonne, Quebec. This is not what the government promised. I suspect that the minister will get up with her well-preserved answers and try to propagandize rather than admit that the government still didn't get it right, even after an extra year and a pilot program. I will ask this again: Do these meals meet or exceed the Canada's Food Guide recommendations?

[Translation]

Hon. C. Johnson (Moncton South, Minister of Education and Early Childhood Development, L): Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you to the opposition member for the interesting nutrition lesson. It is always good to have a little reminder of my sources.

We regularly receive positive feedback on the lunch program. I would like to share the contents of a specific email that we received. The person wanted to take a moment to thank us sincerely for establishing the $4 school meal program. She says that, for her family, the program has really made a difference by making school meals much more affordable. She adds that the program provides her two children with hot and nutritious meals without increasing the financial burden on her family.

On that note, I want to say that many people have thanked us. People are well nourished. Families feel supported. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

[Original]

Mr. Savoie (Saint John East, PC): Madam Speaker, here are the schools in the riding of Saint John Harbour that did not have access to the lunch program: Bayside Middle School, Prince Charles School, Princess Elizabeth School, Saint John High, St. John the Baptist/King Edward School, and St. Malachy's Memorial High School. Unless I missed one, that is every school in the riding.

You would think that this area, an area with some of the highest poverty rates in the province, would have been a priority for the rollout. Some of these schools had existing restaurant-level food programs, with many choices per day, to accommodate taste preferences and dietary needs. These programs were run by volunteers who spent countless thousands of dollars of their own money to help these kids, and every meal was completely free, with leftovers being sent home.

This government kicked these volunteers to the curb and replaced these programs with lower-quality food and less choice, and now, students have to pay, when, before, it was free for all. How does the minister defend these actions? Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Hon. C. Johnson (Moncton South, Minister of Education and Early Childhood Development, L): Madam Speaker, through you to the member opposite, thank you for the opportunity to once again remind everybody in this House that 98% of schools have an affordable lunch program. Although it may seem impressive that he rattled off a few schools, I'd love to remind everybody in the House that there are 291 schools with the affordable lunch program.

Also, I'd love the opportunity to remind everybody that, as a first step, we reached out to community partners, and a lot of them stepped up. That includes Meals on Wheels, CÉ D'ICI, the Réseau des cafétérias communautaires, Fredericton Community Kitchens, and some local restaurants. We have a specific example in Dorchester. There was this tiny restaurant that wasn't even sure it was going to survive. Then, it partnered with the local school and the local—

Mr. Savoie (Saint John East, PC): Madam Speaker, it was supposed to be 100%, it was supposed to be one year ago, and it was supposed to be healthy and nutritious food. Because there are problems with people accessing their online ordering system, here's what happens every day all across the province. If families of students in a school have difficulty logging in and making their choices, the school can enter them as needing a subsidy. Then, the students get these meals sent to them to eat. This means that people who may not need a subsidy are actually getting a complete subsidy. This is another example of the poor management of this slow-walked program, which the government still screwed up.

How can the minister justify this? How rampant is this? Government members like data. Where's the data on this? What is the government doing to fix this problem? Is the minister going to get on her feet and answer for her continued mismanagement of this rollout? Will she tell New Brunswickers how much extra they are going to have to pay for this? Does the minister defend this practice, this ill-conceived rollout? The program still isn't in every single school in the province. Thank you.

Hon. C. Johnson (Moncton South, Minister of Education and Early Childhood Development, L): Madam Speaker, thank you for the opportunity to talk about the school lunch program once again. I'm trying to wrap my head around… There was so much information thrown at me just now.

I'd love to start with the fact that I'm having a hard time understanding why the member opposite is upset that some people are getting fully subsidized meals when he was happy that, before, they were also all paid for. Anyway, this is too much.

However, I would love to share that, on social media, I'm seeing people say again and again that they hate to see us attacked for this because this is a great program. They're saying: Do not let all of this negativity bring you down. This is a great program. It's a game changer for schools. Families feel well supported. Students are well fed and ready to learn. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Mr. Russell (Miramichi West, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. Over a year ago, in September 2025, the Local Governance Commission of New Brunswick released its first report. In the list of recommendations it gave to the Department of Environment and Local Government was mandatory training for elected government officials and senior staff. The proposed training would include the code of conduct, conflicts of interest, roles and responsibilities of elected officials and staff, financial matters, and the Right to Information and Protection of Privacy Act requirements. The commission reported that there is confusion about governance principles and legal obligations. In September 2025, the minister agreed that mandatory training for newly elected officials would be useful. Then, in February 2026, he decided against mandatory training. This is my question: What changed his mind?

[Translation]

Hon. Mr. Kennedy (Quispamsis, Minister of Local Government; Minister responsible for Service New Brunswick, L): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

[Original]

I'm actually quite pleased and proud to advise this House on the training we had for newly elected municipal representatives. They were elected in May, and we had a huge turnout. Over 500 people from across the province turned up to that training in Saint John in June, and the opinion was unanimous. Literally every person I've spoken to who attended that training—and there are many—said how fantastic it was and how important it is to provide them with information, not only for the people newly elected in May but also for people who were returning to mayor or council positions after many years on the job. We are very much going to continue training opportunities for elected representatives. They know how to reach out to me and how to reach out to the Department of Local Government. We have been there to support them, and we will continue to be there to support them, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Russell (Miramichi West, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. In September 2025, the Local Governance Commission reported that, specifically, there is confusion about governance principles and legal obligations, and, frankly, the confusion is leading to avoidable conflict, expense, and stress for these local officials and their staff. Avoiding conflict, expense, and stress… Who wouldn't want to avoid conflict, expense, and stress?

Who wouldn't want to help elected local officials avoid conflict, expense, and stress, especially as these have been identified by resigning local government officials who have had to call it quits for their own peace of mind? Can the minister tell us who in his government is opposed to mandatory training?

Hon. Mr. Kennedy (Quispamsis, Minister of Local Government; Minister responsible for Service New Brunswick, L): Madam Speaker, I think we can all agree that when you force someone to do something, it takes it to a different level. If I am adamantly opposed to doing something and a government member, of all people, comes forward and says I have to do that… This is my example for the member opposite: Say you have a 30-year member of an elected council in New Brunswick who says, flat out: I will not take this mandatory training. What are you, the government, going to do about it? Do the members opposite have any answers for that?

We provided this amazing training for all newly elected representatives about six weeks after they were elected. The training was phenomenal. It was provided by the staff of the Department of Local Government in cooperation with the New Brunswick Community College. Everybody raved about how important and valuable this training was. We continue to offer ongoing support and training to the municipalities, their associations, and the regional service commissions. We are there to work with them. The Premier and I have said many times that municipalities are my top priority. They are my top partners in my role as Minister of Local Government. That action will continue, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Russell (Miramichi West, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am just trying to understand why a good idea stopped being a good idea in just a few short months. If we fast-forward to just a few weeks ago and the second report of the Local Governance Commission, we find the same recommendations for mandatory training. It's not only the Local Governance Commission urging the Holt government to take action but also the Union of the Municipalities of New Brunswick. Local officials, the Union of the Municipalities of New Brunswick, and the Local Governance Commission are in favour of mandatory training, but the Holt government is against mandatory training. Can the minister explain whether it is the cost or the inconvenience to staff in his department that is holding up mandatory training? Or maybe it's a combination of the two.

Hon. Mr. Kennedy (Quispamsis, Minister of Local Government; Minister responsible for Service New Brunswick, L): Madam Speaker, how about a little history lesson on what the Higgs-Allain government was up to when it came to municipalities and local governance reform. What did the members opposite do all across rural New Brunswick?

They forced communities to amalgamate. Let's talk about where there are ongoing problems. We have worked hard with the people of Lakeland Ridges, Sunbury-York South, and Strait Shores, all victims of forced amalgamation by the Higgs-Allain government, to try to solve these problems. We've been working with them to try to make things better.

Let's look at Miramichi River Valley. The member opposite was the mayor of that community. When he quit, it went under supervision as well. Madam Speaker, we are not going to take any lessons from opposition members on how best to deal with valued partners such as the municipalities, the regional service commissions, and the municipal associations of New Brunswick. The former government members left them in a mess, and, with these groups, we've been working hard to make local governance more sustainable in the province.

HOUSING

Ms. Conroy (Miramichi East, PC): Madam Speaker, I always appreciate the ability of the minister responsible for housing to memorize his talking points. However, it's a real shame when he plays the political card because I know that those 14 000 families on the housing wait list do not care about the dollar store politics played in this Legislature. What they do care about is knowing the housing department cares for them.

Let's remind everyone in the House that, in 2022, the minister responsible, when he was a city councillor, went to Twitter and said:

I've never had this many residents calling about housing security. As a municipal Councillor, we're fighting with a hand tied behind our back. The waitlist for housing in NB is 6,000 and in Saint John it's over 1500.

Well, Madam Speaker, under the Holt government, the wait list has grown to 14 000 households, so I can imagine the calls he's getting now. Please put politics aside. What does the minister responsible have to say to the 14 000 families looking for a safe place to live? When can they start to see results and the wait list go down? Those are the people we ask questions for. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Hickey (Saint John Harbour, Minister responsible for the New Brunswick Housing Corporation, L): Thank you, Madam Speaker. The urgency of the affordability crisis in this province is acute. That is why we have invested in housing. Ours is the first government to invest in public housing in my lifetime. Let's be reminded of the opposition members' legacy. Under the Higgs-Allain government, they built—wait for it—zero public housing units, not a single one. We are on track to meet their commitment and then meet our own, totalling 573 new public housing units, the first new units in three decades in this province. New Brunswickers cannot wait any longer for us to respond to their need for affordability in this province, and that is why we are doing this with the urgency it deserves. In the face of the affordability crisis, we are choosing to build. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Ms. Conroy (Miramichi East, PC): They are still waiting. I apologize to the New Brunswickers who can't get an answer out of this government.

Let's also talk about the 1 300 people, many of whom suffer from addiction, living in tents in the province. Here's another brilliant statement made by the minister responsible for housing: The vast majority of people living on the streets are there because of a housing problem and not because of a drug problem. When we provide them with housing, then they lose the reason to use drugs.

We know that's not true. They need a lot more, and I urge the minister responsible to have more consultation meetings with the blogger, as he seems to have more insight into the reality faced by the homeless population in New Brunswick. We know they need more.

Madam Speaker, another winter is coming, so here is my question for the Minister of Housing: What is the minister's plan and specific strategy for getting these folks off the street? Because they deserve more than a task force and lip service. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Hickey (Saint John Harbour, Minister responsible for the New Brunswick Housing Corporation, L): Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's not hard to follow how we ended up in this situation. Under the Higgs-Allain government, rent in this province increased by 46%. If you couldn't afford a 46% increase in your rent, your housing would become more insecure. For thousands of New Brunswickers, that meant homelessness. In the face of that crisis, we are making sure we make the right investments in the right places to continue to offer good housing solutions to people.

Let's look at the previous government's record. It built six treatment care beds for New Brunswickers. In the face of that, we're opening 50, and we're going to continue to build to make sure that the complex care that goes along with addressing homelessness, in certain situations based on acuity, matters.

We are making sure that we continue to deal with the housing crisis in this province. We're doing it in partnership with our builders, we're doing it in partnership with our non-profits, and we're doing it in partnership with other levels of government to make sure we come up with real solutions.

HEALTH CARE

Mr. Hogan (Woodstock-Hartland, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. Let me review the Holt government war on Vitalité by reading the headlines. Here is the October 20 headline: "Clinic to be short nurse practitioners after Vitalité moves them to support hospital". October 21: "Province 'directed' health network to send nurse practitioners back to primary care". This is a week later, on October 28: "Outgoing Vitalité board chair says he ran afoul of Holt Liberals". October 29: "Health minister denies ulterior motive to Vitalité board leadership change". Also from that day: "Health minister disputes that Vitalité board chair is leaving over disagreement". And here is another from that day: "Health minister says he still has faith in the Vitalité CEO". October 31: "New Vitalité board appointed".

Can the Health Minister tell us whether the Premier is planning any other top-level changes at Vitalité?

Hon. Mr. Dornan (Saint John Portland-Simonds, Minister of Health, L): Madam Speaker, I'm very pleased to rise today, first to give thanks to the members for Restigouche East, Restigouche West, and all of Restigouche who identified this problem, this crisis in the emergency department. Madam Speaker, health care is a complex process. I've worked in health care for over 48 years. I've worked with physicians, doctors, and other health care workers. I understand this. I'm not going to debate the solution for the Campbellton hospital in this House today. I am going to remind people that we work closely with Vitalité, which is a strong health care network. With the people at Health and at Vitalité, we will find our way through this crisis. We have been clear. We do not want people taken out of primary care. The nurse practitioners who were with us here today are trained to give primary health care, which is what New Brunswickers want. Our physicians are the same way. Madam Speaker, we have added 6 700 people to the roster. We have added 129 doctors to New Brunswick, and we have added over 900 nurses to New Brunswick, and we have 22 clinics.

Mr. Hogan (Woodstock-Hartland, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. Maybe I should have worded my question differently. Maybe I should have asked the minister if he's been made aware of any beatings he's expected to go out and take in the public any time soon as a result of the actions of the Premier in relation to health care. What I think most New Brunswickers will find confusing is why the Premier and Health Minister are fighting with the health authority because it is trying to keep an emergency department open. Most New Brunswickers understand the word "emergency" to mean that it is a top priority. The members of the Restigouche Regional Service Commission sure do. They urged the Premier and the Health Minister to approve funding for six travel nurses to work at the Campbellton ER for six months while new hires are trained. I don't believe they got an answer. Would the Health Minister care to say yes or no to this today?

Hon. Mr. Dornan (Saint John Portland-Simonds, Minister of Health, L): Madam Speaker, I'm very pleased to get up and thank the previous Board Chair of Vitalité. He gave a yeoman's service, and his time had expired. I remain very thankful. I'm also pleased to speak about our new Board Chair of Vitalité, Lizon Chiasson-Foulem, quite a credible member of our community. If you look her up, you'll realize that. We have a good board. We work collaboratively with those folks. I'm not going to debate the solution for the Campbellton hospital. All I know is that we will solve this. We will keep people in primary care, and we will keep the emergency department open. Thank you very much, member.

Mr. Hogan (Woodstock-Hartland, PC): Thank you, Madam Speaker. The travel nurses are already there. I bet the member for Restigouche East wishes he was allowed to speak out on this issue, but I'm sure that, as the local MLA, he has been muzzled, just as the members of the Saint John caucus have been. They didn't even support their own city. What is very sad is that the Health Minister is one of their members. The Health Minister from Saint John did not support growing the Saint John health cluster. It's no wonder the rest of the Saint John caucus quailed when the Health Minister blenched. They fell in behind him. Madam Speaker, I bet the member for Restigouche East wishes he could tell the Premier that her intrusion on this issue is unwelcome, unwarranted, and unprofessional, but he can't. So I will turn to her for him.

However, let's go back to the Health Minister. Can he tell us whether he has given the member for Restigouche East any time on this issue?

Hon. Mr. Dornan (Saint John Portland-Simonds, Minister of Health, L): Madam Speaker, the member opposite could be forgiven for not knowing who represents what riding. I am glad to say that we do listen to the members from the Restigouche area and the area surrounding the Campbellton hospital. We do talk to other people in health care.

You know, Madam Speaker, the Higgs-Allain government is responsible for the enshittification of health care in this province. I'm very pleased to know that we are climbing out of that crater.

We have good people at work, including doctors, nurses, and nurse practitioners, a good RHA in Vitalité, and a very good Department of Health. We will work together to provide better care for New Brunswickers so that they will see the future they deserve. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

HOMELESSNESS

Ms. M. Johnson (Carleton-Victoria, Leader of the Official Opposition, PC): Madam Speaker, yesterday, I asked the Premier a very straightforward question: Does she genuinely believe that her government is on track to meet its own commitment to reduce chronic homelessness by 40% by 2028-29? Instead of receiving an answer from the Premier, we heard from the Housing Minister. Madam Speaker, while additional housing options are welcome, his response still did not answer the question of whether this government is meeting its province-wide target. The government describes its objective as "clear and measurable", yet chronic homelessness continues to move in the wrong direction. Madam Speaker, I'm going to ask this once again: Based on the current numbers, does the Premier believe that her government is on track to reduce chronic homelessness by 40% by 2028-29?

Hon. Mr. Hickey (Saint John Harbour, Minister responsible for the New Brunswick Housing Corporation, L): Thank you, Madam Speaker. The homelessness crisis is front-of-mind for people in every New Brunswick community feeling its impact. We have not seen the numbers decrease as we would like to. Over the past few months, we have seen chronic numbers increase. We believe that we have the right plan to get us to our commitment of a 40% reduction within the timeline. We believe that we have the plan through A Path Home, the document we released that outlines our strategy for addressing chronic homelessness. We believe we have the strategy to get there.

Over the past few months, we have not seen the numbers trend in the direction that we want. In the face of that, we are making sure that we double down on our investments in supportive and bridge housing to make sure that communities that are desperate for support are getting what they need. We will be prepared to deal with the emergency crises on the streets of communities across the province. Thank you.

VETERINARIANS

Ms. M. Johnson (Carleton-Victoria, Leader of the Official Opposition, PC): Madam Speaker, this week, the Department of Agriculture, Aquaculture and Fisheries is preparing to deliver its long-service awards to staff who've served 20 years, 25 years, and, for some, 30 years. Some of the people who will be receiving these awards are long-serving veterinarians who are going to be asked to go shake hands with and receive a certificate from a gentleman who will have, as of next month, given them their walking papers. I ask the Minister of Agriculture, Aquaculture and Fisheries this: How are you going to handle that?

The second part is this: We're in November. December is coming. I understand that the minister still has not gone to meet with staff at Carleton AgriSolutions regarding the rollout of the new plan for veterinary services. Can the minister stand and tell us, one, how he is going to handle meeting the people he has dismissed, and two, what he's—

[Translation]

Hon. Mr. Finnigan (Kent North, Minister of Agriculture, Aquaculture and Fisheries, L): Thank you, Madam Speaker. I will be very pleased to congratulate the employees who have been working hard for the Department of Agriculture, Aquaculture and Fisheries for a long time, some for 25 years. I will certainly be there to shake their hands if they want to shake mine; I will be very proud of their achievements, and I thank them for them.

Madam Speaker, since the announcement in March, things have been going very well. They are going exactly as we planned. A very strong company from the region of the member opposite will provide the service. Yesterday, we had another meeting with its representatives. Everything is going as planned. We are very pleased, and we were assured that the service would be provided after March 28.

Madam Speaker, I would like to talk a bit about our achievements. This afternoon, we will make an announcement about our expansion plan for the agricultural sector. We will also talk about climate change with the Minister of Environment and Climate Change. We are very connected…

Madam Speaker (Hon. Ms. Landry): Question period is now over.
